

David Holahan

David Holahan is a retired officer from the United States Marine Corps who graduated from the United States Naval Academy in 1990.

During his 21-year career, David has developed substantial and somewhat unique experiences leading teams and working in challenging environments, including two years of combat in Iraq. Following his military service, David began to use his leadership skills to help businesses achieve new projects and implement business changes here in Latvia.

After several successful projects, he began to focus more on providing training in leadership as well as strategy development. His clients in the Baltics include online-retailers, software companies, real-estate development and wholesalers. He also runs his own small businesses.
